EUCHARISTIC
ADORATION

"The time you spend with Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament is the best time you will spend on earth." – St. Teresa of Calcutta

Connecting the Gospel to Today's Cultural Context

The end will come, even if (in this modern culture of ours) we ignore it, or don't admit it, or forget about it. It will come for all of us. Even science tells us that. Rather than getting worked up about it, Jesus encourages us to prepare for it. Live every day as if it were your last: that's good advice. Meanwhile, Jesus call us to do what we are here for: to grow as we go on our journey of life. That's the best preparation for death. While life as we know it will pass away, the words of Jesus will not pass away. His teaching of God as a loving Father, his giving us a glimpse of eternity in his Resurrection, his telling us not to worry, his promise to return to take us with him: none of these things will ever change. Focus on them rather than getting worked up about crisis after crisis.
